Description Summary:

The Edmondson Village Historic District is a residential neighborhood with dense blocks of rowhouses spread across ten north-south and nine east-west streets in the western section of Baltimore, Maryland. The oldest blocks immediately adjoining the former streetcar line on Edmondson Avenue took shape in the early 1910s and followed the rectilinear plan typical of Baltimore's more central neighborhoods. By the early 1920s, however, a more picturesque plan took shape with Denison, Edgewood, Linnard, and Grantley Streets all turning sharply north of Harlem Avenue to more closely follow the uneven shape of the property adjoining Leakin Park. The subsequent development of Wildwood Parkway and adjoining blocks continued to build on this trend and hasten the transition from a streetcar suburb towards a more automobile-centered community.

The neighborhood's churches and the limited commercial development (mostly built as first-floor storefronts within rowhouses) remained close to the streetcar line located on Edmondson Avenue through the 1950s. The homes are almost exclusively rowhouses, the oldest built close to Edmondson Avenue in the late 1910s, 1920s and mid-1930s. A second wave of development in the 1940s filled in the remaining blocks in the northern end of the neighborhood.

Open space in the neighborhood is a mix of planned and unplanned parks. Wildwood Parkway featured a green strip running down the center and Woodington Road offered Gelston Park (a triangular open space formed by the intersection of Wicklow Road, Gelston Drive, and N. Woodington Road). In the 1930s, James Keelty donated a large parcel on Allendale Street to the city in lieu of payment for taxes forming Leakin Park. A few decades later, undeveloped lots between Kevin Road and Woodington Road remained abandoned for decades until community advocates encouraged the conversion of these spaces into Harlem and Denison Park, the Rokeby Road Park, the Flowerton Road Park, and the Kevin and Woodridge Park.

General Description:

Developer James Keelty and architect Frederick Beall varied the rowhouses they built during this period to initially to match the growing interest in daylight rowhouses and Colonial Revival homes and later to suit the more limited budget of home-buyers in the 1930s and 1940s. The rowhouses in the district can be grouped into a series of categories organized chronologically by date of construction:

- Duplex Rowhouses (1910s)
- Flat-Front Italianate Rows (early to mid-1920s)
- Tile-Roof Daylight Rows (mid-1920s)

- Wildwood Type Colonial Revival Rows (late 1920s)
- Tudor Revival Rows (1930s)
- Mansard Roofs and Cross Gable Rows (late 1930s early 1940s?)
- Mansard Roof Rows (1940s)
- Mansard Roof Rows (mid-1940s)
- Post-WWII Colonial Revival Rows (late 1940s)

Within each category there are variations in features, such as the style of porch roof, the location and number of windows, and decorative elements on the cornice. A description for these categories, listing related blocks and variations within each category begins below. This section is followed by a description of the Edmondale Apartments, churches, and the Lyndhurst Elementary School.

Duplex Row Houses (1910s)

600 block of Loudon Avenue (Renaissance Revival – built 1912)

3300 block of Edmondson Avenue (flat-front duplex – built c. 1919)

3300-318 Edmondson Avenue (daylight duplex with bay window – built c. 1919)

3900 block of Edmondson Avenue (daylight duplex with bay window – built 1921)

4000 block of Edmondson Avenue (cottage style duplex)

The duplex style rowhouses are all among the oldest homes within the district with a variety that comes in part from a number of distinct builders. One of the most interesting are a small group of Renaissance Revival style duplex pairs on the 600 block of Loudon Avenue. These homes feature stone front porches and abstract Palladian windows on the second floor. The porches run the full width of the houses and contain stone supports and stone caps. Behind the porches are two bays on first floor, one with a large tripartite window and the other is the front door. The windows and front door have transoms. The transom above the front door is stained glass. Basement windows flank either side of the stone steps on the front porch. These are casement windows and are arched with 4 lights per window. The stone above them is arched as well. The second story (above the porch) is one bay with abstract Palladian windows surrounded by attenuated drip mold that helps to pull elements together. The roof is has a double front facing gable with overhanging eaves and exposed rafters. The main roof is flat with simple wood cornice. The houses have porch roofs that mimic the primary roof with double front facing gables with overhanging eaves. The tympanum in the gables is made of bead board. The front facades are stucco over brick. On the sides of the houses are oriel windows.

The houses in the 600 block of Loudon Avenue, there is a single house in this same style at 4000 Edmondson at the corner of Loudon Avenue. This house has a garage in the rear. It is vacant, partially boarded and partially exposed, and in an advanced state of deterioration.

There are three non-contiguous rows within the district that are distinguished by houses with bay windows on the second floor of the front facade. Bay windows are unusual in the district, and these two-story houses stand out. The houses have brick facades, are two-stories tall, and have full-width front porches. The second floor bay occupies the entire front of the house, and the windows in the bays are 1 over 1. They have wood cornices. They have transoms above the front doors.

Each of the three rows within this group has distinguishing characteristics. The houses in the 3300 block of Edmondson Avenue have strait Italianate cornices and a wood belt course above the second story windows. They also have stylized brackets along the cornice between each house. The porches are made of brick and contain a set of paired basement windows on the front with a segmental arch of yellow brick above. The capitals of the brick piers on the porch are granite, and there is a granite cap over the brick fill on the porch. The porch has a shed roof and Doric wood columns.

The houses in the 3900 block of Edmondson are built in pairs, with approximately ten feet of clear space between each pair. They have a roofline that follows the bay window. The roof is overhanging and is ornamented with dentals. The houses have floor-to-ceiling windows on the first floor and sandstone lintels. The porch foundations are stone, and the porch columns are flared. The porches have cross-gabled roofs. This row is also on a steep grade and the front steps are built in segments at a 45-degree angle with the landings.

The houses in the 600 block of Lyndhurst Street are three bays wide and are built in groups of two. Each pair is separated by five feet of open space. The bay window on the second floor is projecting. The windows have segmental arches and the cornices have a strong overhang. The foundations are stone.

Most of the 700 block of N. Grantley Street is a green-tile roof daylight - 782-798 N. Grantley Street – built 1930

The examples of Italianate rowhouses in Edmondson Village are all two-story high and two and three bays wide with fieldstone or brick foundations. The front facades are generally red brick set in a running bond pattern, although in some rows the running bond is interspersed with a pattern of two headers and three stretchers for every 15 or so courses. The houses are mostly two rooms deep and have front porches. The porch width varies between the full width of the house and the width of a single bay. Most porches have shed roofs, while a few have gabled or hipped roofs. In some rows, the porches are shared in pairs while in others each house has its own separate porch. Porch columns were originally wood and included Doric, tapered square, and turned styles, although today many original wood columns have been replaced with iron ones. Most houses have transoms above the front door. The houses generally have wood cornices with block or Greek medallions. Some rows contain a wooden course below the cornice. The houses are generally separated by parapet walls that protrude above the roof-line.

Some rows have sandstone or brick lintels below the windows, and some rows contain jack arches above the windows. Most of the rows are two-stories tall, three bays wide, and two rooms deep. They have wood cornices and front porches.

The first is the 600 block of Edgewood Street (west side), which is notable for having yellow brick not seen anywhere else in the district. The second is part of the 700 block of Linnard Street (west side), beginning with 748 Linnard, contains green pantile false-mansard roofs with an anthemion motif at the corners

Two blocks contain smaller Italianate houses that are two bays wide and two rooms deep. Although smaller than their three-bay counterparts, these houses have transoms above the front doors. These blocks are the 3800 block of Gelston Drive (south side), a small row with only three houses, and the 700 block of Hilton Street (west side).

Finally, there is one Italianate structure along the district's primary street, Edmondson Avenue. This building at 3514 Edmondson is on the corner of Edmondson and Linnard Street. It is three stories tall on the Edmondson Avenue side. It appears that the building originally was an Italianate house like others in the district that was modified to have a store front on Edmondson Avenue.

Tile-Roof Daylight Rows (mid-1920s)

600-700 Allendale Street (east and west sides – built 1926-1927)

600 Mt. Holly Street (east and west sides – built 1928)

700 Linnard Street (east side – built 1923)

3600 Eversley Street (south side – built 1925)

3600-3700 Edmondson Avenue (north sides – built 1926)

3600-3800 Harlem Avenue (north and sides – built 1925-1932)

600 block of Hilton Street (with noted differences)

A number of rows in Edmondson Village are characterized by two story houses with dominant tile mansard roofs. These houses are three bays wide and are made of red brick in a running bond pattern. They have front porches with flat roofs. In many rows, pairs of houses share a porch roof. The porch foundations are prominent and are made of fieldstone, brick, and concrete. The porch columns are made of wood in the Tuscan and tapered square styles. Many (but not all) rows have transoms above the front door and side lights around the door. The houses have a wood cornice below the roof. In some rows, there is a course of soldier bricks below the cornice, while in others there is not. The houses are separated by parapet walls that protrude above the roofline.

Window description. The treatment above the windows varies between brick jack arches and stone lintels, and some rows contain keystones. The size of the second story windows varies. In some rows, there are three second story windows on the front façade that all of the same size, while in other rows the window above the door is either smaller or larger than the other two.

600 block of Hilton Street: Three Story Row with Mansard Roof and Dormer Windows

The west side of the 600 block of Hilton contains a row of houses unlike any others in the district. These houses are three stories with a slate mansard roof containing a single dormer window. The houses are three bays wide and three rooms deep. The cornice has block medallions and egg and dart motif. There are sandstone lintels and sills, stone foundations, and front porches that cover two of the three bays. The original windows are 2 over 2. The brick pattern is predominantly running bond, although the side brick is 5 to 1 English bond. There are brick parapets between each house. The houses have transoms above front doors that likely originally contained stained glass.

Wildwood Type Colonial Revival Rows (late 1920s)

600 N. Woodington Road (east and west sides – built 1928-29)
700 N. Woodington Road (east side – built 1929)
800 N. Woodington Road (west side – built 1928)
600 Wildwood Parkway (east and west sides)
600 Augusta Avenue (east and west sides – built 1929)
4100 Edmondson Avenue (north side – built 1929)

There is a cluster of rows in the southwest section of the district that contain distinct three-story houses with dominant cross gables and dormer windows in the roof line. These rows are along north-south main streets, with the exception of a small section on Edmondson Avenue. The houses have slate roofs and brick chimneys between each house. Every fourth house in the row has a full cross gable roof with paired windows, while the houses in between have a single paired dormer window. The houses are made of brick and the predominate pattern is three stretchers for every two headers. They are two bays wide with front porches that run nearly the entire width of the house. The porch roofs vary between a closed gable style and a shed style, while the columns are made of wood and follow either a square tapered style or a 3 close-set pattern. The porch material is either brick or stone. Many houses have jack arches above the front door and first floor windows.

Tudor Revival Rows (1930s)

3700-4000 Gelston Drive (north sides – built 1932-1936)
700 block of Lyndhurst Street (east and west sides – built 1931/1936)
3700-4000 Cranston Avenue (north and south sides – built 1936-1938)
3700-3900 Woodridge Road (north and south sides – built 1939-1940)

Several rows of houses in the district are notable for their Tudor influence. These rows contain houses with steep projecting gable roofs, often alternating with houses that have steep pitched roofs without a gable. The roofs are made of either grey or multi-colored slate. Some houses have two or three windows within the large gable while others have no windows. The houses are two and two-and-a-half stories tall with running bond brick on the front façade. Some (but not all) houses have front porches. Where porches exist, they run the full width of the house with one exception: the west side of the 700 block of Lyndhurst Street where the porches are one bay wide. Porch roofs are either hipped or shed style and include front or side gables. Some houses have front doors with Dutch 6-lights with panels below, and some houses include front door transom lights.

The second style of house is demonstrated by the rows in the 3800 block of Gelston Drive (north side). These houses are distinguished by a pair of projecting cross gables on the second story and virtually 90-degree pitched slate mansard roof. This style house repeats every 3rd house in the row. Between them are houses with steep mansard roofs but without the paired cross gables.

The 700 block of Lyndhurst Street (east side) is unlike the other rows of Tudor-influenced houses. It is distinguished by having some houses with large cross gables that have a prominent flair. This style house appears every third house in the row. The gable is located in the middle of a pair of rowhouses. The main roof also has a prominent flair. It is made of multi-colored slate and contains dormer windows: a paired larger set and a smaller stand-alone window. In between the flared gable houses are houses that have vertical (not flared) cross gables on the front, with three dormer windows in them. These gables contain half timbering and stucco. Under the flared center gable are 2 arched doors (one for each unit) that have stones on either side of the door that resemble coins. In this row, the center chimneys project in front. The first floor windows are tripartite and the houses are 2 bays wide. The stoops are concrete slab and run the full width of the house.

The 700 block of Lyndhurst Street (west side, beginning with 714 Lyndhurst) is also notable within the Tudor-influenced rows. This row has houses that are paired to share a center cross gable on the front. The houses share a small front porch that has arched entrance ways. They are two bays wide and share a central chimney that projects above the gable. The roof is multi-colored slate. The windows on the first floor are tripartite and on the second floor, there are a pair of windows and a separate much smaller window above the door. The porch foundations are brick, while the house foundation is stone. The center unit has keystones in the arches and stone coins on the porch supports.

One of the most prevalent styles of rows, found mainly in the central and northwest section of the district, are ones with mansard roofs along the entire row where every third or fourth house has a dominant cross gabled roof. On some rows, the houses on the end have full-width projecting cross gables, while on other rows the gables on the end houses are only partial-width. The roofs were originally slate, and slate remains on many of the rows. The houses are predominately two bays wide and two stories tall, although a few rows contain houses that are three bays wide. They have one-over-one windows on the first and second floors that are sometimes paired and sometimes stand alone. On the second floor, some houses have three windows and some only two. Occasional houses have a bay window on the first floor, possibly an "extra" feature that the original homeowner ordered when buying the house new. The 700 and 800 blocks of Augusta Avenue (east and west sides) are prime examples of this. They have front porches with variable styles of roofs that include: shed, gabled, and hip. As with the main roof, the porch roofs are predominately slate. The porch column styles vary between Tuscan and a three-set pattern. On some of the houses, pilasters surround the front doors.

Post-WWII Colonial Revival Rows (late 1940s)

700 Wildwood Parkway (east side)
800-1200 Wildwood Parkway (east and west sides)
800-900 North Woodington Road (east and west sides – partial)

3900 Glen Hunt Road (north and south sides) – built 1949
4100 Glen Hunt Road (north and south sides) – built 1949
3900 Mountwood Road (north and south sides – built 1949)
4100 Mountwood Road (north and south sides – partial– built 1949)

The northwest section of the district is populated with rows of two-story houses with shed style roofs that are bracketed on either end of the row by 2 ½ story-houses with dominant cross gables. These gables occupy the entire width of the house. The houses (both the end and center units) are two bays wide. A few of the rows have metal casement windows; most have one-over-one or three-over-three double hung windows. The houses mostly have porches with gable or shed style roofs. Many houses have pilaster door surrounds with scallop and dental details.

Another dominant category in the district, and the one with the fewest architectural details, is blocks with rows of 2-story houses that have mansard roofs without gables. There are a number of small stylistic variations within this group, but they are all two-stories tall, two or three bays wide, and have brick facades. Their roofs were originally slate, which mostly remain intact but in several instances have been replaced with shingles. Some houses have casement windows while others have double hung windows. On the second floor, some houses have one paired and one single window while others have two single windows. Additionally, some houses have a belt course below the second story windows. Most of the houses have front porches, the width of which varies between running the full width of the house and running only one or two bays. The style of porch roofs include gabled, shed, mansard, and hipped, and the support columns are mainly Tuscan in style. The houses have foundations, which are either in stone or brick, and some of the houses have basement windows on the front. Some houses have lights surrounding the front door (typically five per side).

Another dominant category in the district, and the one with the fewest architectural details, is blocks with rows of 2-story houses that have mansard roofs without gables. There are a number of small stylistic variations within this group, but they are all two-stories tall, two or three bays wide, and have brick facades. Their roofs were originally slate, which mostly remain intact but in several instances have been replaced with shingles. Some houses have casement windows while others have double hung windows. On the second floor, some houses have one paired and one single window while others have two single windows. Additionally, some houses have a belt course below the second story windows. Most of the houses have front porches, the width of which varies between running the full width of the house and running only one or two bays. The style of porch roofs include gabled, shed, mansard, and hipped, and the support columns are mainly Tuscan in style. The houses have foundations, which are either in stone or brick, and some of the houses have basement windows on the front. Some houses have lights surrounding the front door (typically five per side).

Religious Buildings

All Saints Lutheran Church/Mount Olive Holy Evangelical Apostolic (1922) – 3816 Edmondson Avenue

The Mount Olive Holy Evangelistic Church is designed in the Romanesque style with Gothic influence. The one-story building is composed primarily of granite with a moderately pitched gable roof. It has arched Romanesque windows with Gothic triangular pediments above them. The southwest corner of the church at Lyndhurst Street has a castellated tower with pointed Gothic buttresses. There is a course of sandstone above sets of paired windows. It has small buttresses capped with sandstone, as well as sandstone sills.

Edmondson Avenue Methodist Church/Manifest Wonders Christian Center (1924-1925) – 3600 Edmondson Avenue

The Edmondson Avenue Methodist Church, now occupied by the Manifest Wonders Christian Center, was built 1924-1925 and is designed in the Gothic Revival style. The main façade is oriented to the south on Edmondson Avenue. It has gothic arched windows with stained glass containing a trefoil motif. Under the windows, there are quatrefoil motifs. There are buttresses on the front façade along with a flared water table. There is small two-story tower on the southeast corner of the building that includes the main entrance to the sanctuary on the Edmondson Avenue façade, as well as a smaller basement-level side entrance on the east facade. The building's west projection, likely originally the rectory, has a roof with eyebrow windows in a trefoil pattern. It has a slate mansard roof with gothic dormers. Arched granite caps are located above the windows with the same quatrefoil motif as found in the central part of the building. The west projection similarly has buttresses as are found on the main building. To the west of the rectory is a small 1951 addition built in a rectangular plan with square windows. It has the same flared water table as in the other buildings. The north facade of the buildings has little ornamentation and no windows.

St. Bernadine's Roman Catholic Church (1928-29) – 3812 Edmondson Avenue

St. Bernadine's Roman Catholic Church is designed in a cruciform plan featuring a prominent tower on the southeast corner. The building is composed of granite and has a painted metal cornice. The south façade (main façade) has a Palladian door, columns with organic (not classical) capitals. It has an arched tripartite recessed window in the center bay. Above this main window is an arch that has a keystone and two flanking buttresses that have niches with statues. The north façade has a roof with side gables and projecting cross gables on the east façade. There is a prominent chimney on the north side, and the apse is octagonal. The east façade has Romanesque windows with Romanesque arches and a rosette motif. The lintels and sills are granite. The roof has a cross gables and a parapet, and there are lancet windows below the lower level. The west projection differs from the east projection in that it is semi-circular and one story. It is composed of the same granite as is used throughout the building. The tower has a flared water table, a gold dome, and arched windows. There are lancet windows between the dome and the entrance. These are set within a blind recess that has stone corbelling at top. At the top of the tower, there are pendants on all four corners.

To the west of the church is a rectory in the same Gothic Revival style facing Edmondson Avenue. It is composed of the same granite as in the church. It has a crow-stepped parapet with a blank frieze below and two granite courses. The entrance door is a projection from the building and is on the side. Above the door is a drip mold parapet, and buttresses around the door mimic those found on the church. To the west of the rectory there is a mid-century yellow brick building that currently houses the St. Bernadine's Head Start program. This building is square in shape and has a double stair at the front entrance. It has a very slight crow-stepped parapet under which is a row of soldier bricks. There is a sandstone surround at the front door with a transom above.

Attached to the north of the church is Saint Bernadine's Harcum Hall facing Mt. Holly Street. This building is composed of the same granite found in the church and contains the same water table. The building has a recessed arch containing the date 1920. It has a center pavilion surrounded by stone pilasters on both sides and tripartite windows. The building is castellated at the top.

Central Methodist Episcopal Church South/New Covenant United Methodist Church (1929-1930) – 700 Wildwood Parkway

The New Covenant Worship Center is Gothic Revival in style. The building is composed of brick laid in the Flemish Bond pattern and has faux buttresses on its front facade. The front façade has a gabled slate roof with a parapet. On the front face is a center-arched doorway made of granite with abounding coins composed of sandstone. Two square lancet windows flank the center door. These have window hoods and drip moldings, as wells coins similar to the ones surrounding the door. The door itself has wood paneling with dentals that are not likely original. The north façade has jack arches above basement windows. It has faux buttresses and drip mold arched windows in the Gothic style. The windows have stained glass, as well as 45-degree angled sills that match the flare on the buttresses.

Attached to the south side of the church is a parish house. This building is designed in the Gothic Revival style. There is a central projection with a tripartite window surrounded by tracery. A frieze with a Gothic motif lies below this window. The building has arched windows with granite sills, a flat roof, and a small sandstone cornice. It has a sandstone water table approximately five feet high. Above this is a belt course. There are brick pilasters on each corner. The building has a small projection with a door on the south side.

Edgewood Theatre/Mount Olivet Baptist Church (1930) - 3500 Edmondson Avenue

The Mount Olivet Baptist Church stands at the corner of Edmondson Avenue and Edgewood Street and is designed in the Classical Revival style. It was built in 1922, with significant repairs made in 1982, as the keystone reflects. The building has a projecting pavilion in its center and a tile roof. The foundation is cement. The east and west facades contain scant ornamentation with few windows. On these facades, there are several bays that are filled with concrete block that likely originally contained doors or windows. The front façade on the first floor has brick corbelling up to second story and brick courses and corbelling across the front. The front façade is pierced with cement blocks at regular intervals that were likely originally windows that have been filled in. The water table contains rosettes and regular patterns and has a running Greek key pattern under it. The second story has three arched recessed windows in the pavilion with two Doric columns. There are two flanking pilasters on each side. The second story also contains a belt course and large pilasters that are flanked by smaller pilasters. The windows have jack arches above them. On the third and top story, there is a center pavilion with a frieze in a blind arch. The frieze has a palmetto motif and a keystone in the center of the arches. In the pavilion, the cornice has a triglyph motif with dentals above. Above the cornice, there is an egg and dart pattern.

Lyndhurst Elementary School (1926) – 621 Wildwood Parkway

The original Lyndhurst Elementary School is a Spanish Mission style school building located facing Wildwood Parkway with a 1951 addition on the east and a c. 1970 addition on the rear. The main façade (west façade) of the building has two flanking wings on either side to the north and south. The wings are taller in the final bay at each end to give the appearance of bell towers. The main façade is five bays wide with a recessed entrance with a blind arch. A cartouche above the door is inscribed “LS” for Lyndhurst School. The central door has window surrounds and sandstone pilasters. On either side of the main door are prominent iron lights.

The north façade has blind arches above the front door, as well as a cartouche in the center above the door. The roof is made of tar shingles and the eaves extend slightly and have brackets under them. The roofline varies: each end has dominating front falling gables and the main length is side gabled with cross gables. There are two prominent Spanish Mission style chimneys capped with terra cotta tile. The cap is gabled. All four sides of each chimney have segmental arched openings and blind windows with differing infill stone that give the chimneys a bell tower appearance. The windows in the main building are paired or ribbon in style and have surrounding pilasters. The south façade mirrors the north façade except the windows on the first floor remain open (not filled with stone). The windows on the second story are casement with three panes of glass.

Summary Statement of Significance:

The Edmondson Village Historic District is significant under Criterion A for its associations with the development of rowhouse neighborhoods in West Baltimore during the early 20th century and under Criterion B for its association with James Keelty - one of the city's most prominent and influential rowhouse developers.

The earliest suburban development of Edmondson Village began in the mid-19th century when large rural estates began to be subdivided for the development. On these smaller parcels local builders constructed rowhouses and cottages designed as summer homes for city residents. The expansion of transportation infrastructure quickly created more opportunities for the development of rowhouses marketed to the city's growing middle class population. Between 1910 and 1950, the city's population grew from 558,485 to a high of 949,708. Accommodating this growth required the construction of thousands of new homes. The development Edmondson Village is characteristic of the growth and development of late streetcar suburbs around the city.

James Keelty is an exceptional figure in the history of Baltimore's early 20th century development. Along with a handful of other major builders like Edward Gallagher, Frank Novak, and Ephraim Macht, Keelty bridged the dramatic change in residential building and development from the subdividers of the late 1800s to the home builders of the first few decades of the 1900s. His work in Edmondson Village (and Rodger's Forge) served as an inspiration for the next generation of community builders who applied his commitment to consistent design and community amenities in the city's continued outward growth during the 1940s.<sup>1</sup>

The district is also significant under Criterion C for its close association with the popularization of the daylight rowhouse as an innovative design response to the changing expectations and preferences of Baltimore home-buyers during the first half of the 20th century.

The design of the daylight rowhouse was a vernacular response to the increasing popularity of the detached dwellings found in the growing garden suburbs around Baltimore in the late 19th and early 20th century. Daylight rowhouses were typically wider and shallower than the narrow and deep plans that typified the rowhouses of the late 19th century. Developers like James Keelty marketed the presence of at least one window in each room of the dwelling and the projecting front porches that are also found on dwellings throughout the district. With the increasing prosperity of Baltimore residents during the 1920s and the efforts by developers to market these homes to middle-income households, the two-story daylight house was an overwhelmingly popular housing option for Baltimore.

The Period of Significance begins in 1892 with the initial effort to develop the area following annexation by Baltimore City and extension of streetcar service, and ends in 1959 when residential development was substantially completed.

Resource History and Historic Context:

This resource history for Edmondson Village begins with a description of the country mansions and estates located in the vicinity during the first half of the 19th century. The history continues with a review of the initial efforts to develop the community by the Lyndhurst Improvement Company in the 1890s. A more detailed description of the residential development of the neighborhood begins with James Keelty's first acquisitions in the area around 1917. Finally, the history continues up through the conclusion of the physical development of the neighborhood in the late 1950s and the concluding context for the changing population of the neighborhood between World War II and the late 1960s.

Early Estates in Edmondson Village - 1600s to 1880s

The early history of Edmondson Village, the area of Baltimore County located west of the Gwynn's Falls, began with the country homes and estates built from the 1700s through the 1800s. Early large estates and land grants included "Morning's Choice," "Parker's Place" (a 1695 grant to Robert Parker), and "Bonnie Brae." As late as 1873, Baltimore historian George Washington Howard observed the isolation of the area by the Falls made it an attractive location for country estates and residences, writing:

Notwithstanding the fact that the region of country lying immediately west and southwest of Baltimore has never been so thickly settled as the suburbs in the northwestern and northern direction, its peculiar beauty of scenery and superior natural advantages have not by any means escaped attention. Indeed it is certain that but for the interposition of "Gwynn's Falls," the territory to which we refer would long ago have been dotted with villas and the streets of the city would have extended that way a mile or two beyond their present limits. The picturesque appearance of the valley through which the stream referred to flows, has always made it a favorite resort of those who sought to ride or drive from the city through the most attractive district and purest atmosphere...

North of the Frederick Road and south of the Franklin turnpike, there is also being constructed another avenue, to be called "EDMONDSON AVENUE." ...This avenue, after passing on the eastern side of the falls, through the extensive property of Mr. A.S. Abell and Mr. Charles Shipley, and what was part of the old almshouse farm, enters on the western side of the stream and passes through the extensive estates of the late Captain Richard B. Fitzgerald, William Heald, Hugh Gelston, and Hon. Reverdy Johnson, Lindhurst. On or near its line are the Cathedral Cemetery, and the beautiful country seats, residences, and property of Charles M. Heald, Allendale; James A. Wilson, Bonnie Brae; John Swan, Hunting Ridge; Thomas Winans; William F. Frick; P.S. Chappell's estate; William Wilkens, Villa Wilkens; Arthur H. Mann, Laurel Hill; George F. Page, Mt. DeSales; S.S. Boggs, Prospect Hill; George R. Granger, Oak Lawn; Ross Campbell's estate; Mr. Crosby's estate; George J. Appold, Glenwild... Miss Gibson, Ingleside Seminary; A.W. Stehman.<sup>2</sup>

The most significant of the these properties within or nearby the Edmondson Village Historic District include: Gelston Heights, home to Hugh Gelston; Uplands, home to Mary Frick Garrett Jacobs; Hunting Ridge, home to Edward Austin Jenkins; the Lyndhurst estate, home of Reverdy Johnson; and the Allendale estate built by John Heald. Other early property owners included William F. Rodgers and William O. Nelson who owned property in Baltimore County now occupied by Rognel Heights.

Hugh Gelston establishes Gelston Heights— 1800s

Hugh Gelston was born on August 31, 1794 on his family's farm near East Haddain, Essex County, Connecticut. Gelston first visited Baltimore in 1813 working for a jewelry trading company and returned to the city in 1816 to operate a branch office for the same firm, expanding his enterprise under the name of Gelston & Gould. Gelston became close friends with fellow businessman George Peabody and earned a reputation for profitable investments in Baltimore real estate. After his death on August 5, 1873, The Baltimore Sun reported on his position and the commanding location of his country residence:

His sagacity and foresight enabled him to appreciate the position and advantages and probable commercial importance of Baltimore, and nearly all of his investments were continuously made in real estate. He, however, established the Calverton carpet manufactory on Gwynn's falls at the foot of the heights upon the farm on the Franklin road, where he erected a stately residence, commanding a beautiful view of the city, river and bay, and surrounding country.<sup>3</sup>

His son, Hugh Gelston, had a city residence at 12 E. Chase Street, but continued to use the home as noted in a report regarding his marriage in 1908: "His home at Gelston Heights is one of the most beautiful country estates near Baltimore. Situated on the summit of a hill, it is a charming example of an old-fashioned country residence."<sup>4</sup> By the 1910s, Gelston Heights operated as a sanitarium in the summer months. In late December 1915, the home burned down.<sup>5</sup>

Reverdy Johnson builds Lyndhurst – 1800s

Reverdy Johnson had a long career in public service as the United States Attorney General under President Tyler and, later, as the ambassador from the United States to England. Lyndhurst was Reverdy Johnson's country home and estate located just north of Edmondson Avenue. Later on this property was the residence of Henry Bogue.

Charles M. Heald builds Allendale – 1850

Allendale was built in 1850 as the home for Charles M. Heald. In 1949, former resident Emmet White recalled the mansion on the Allendale estate, writing:

"When it was built it was the only house between the falls and Bonnie Brae Cemetery. When I was a boy, the house--which is now at Allendale and Mulberry streets – stood alone on top of a hill that gave a view to the harbor as though it were at your feet. The driveway that led to the house entered Edmondson avenue at what is now Hilton Street."<sup>6</sup>

Growing streetcar suburbs in the new West Baltimore annex - 1880s - 1900s

In the decades after the United States Civil War, new investments in transportation and infrastructure started to connect the area to Baltimore City and built anticipation for development. The extension of Edmondson Avenue (known as Thompson Street before 1871) began in 1868 when Baltimore acquired the land from Dr. Thomas Edmondson to extend the road west from Fremont Street to Kirby's Lane located just west of Fulton Avenue. In 1880, a new trestle bridge, designed by Wendell Bollman, carried Edmondson Avenue over the Gwynns Falls.

Baltimore City expands west of the Gwynns Falls with annexation - 1888

Transportation was only one of the factors shaping the early development of the area. The annexation of the district into Baltimore City in 1888 opened new tax incentives for developers and property owners and played an important role in promoting development along the Edmondson Avenue corridor from Fulton Avenue to Catonsville.

In 1874 and again in 1882, Baltimore City had made efforts to annex the so-called "belt" of developing land in Baltimore County around the edges of the city, including portions of Edmondson Village, into the city. Both campaigns failed due to worries about steep tax increases and the city's limited commitments for expanding public services. Over the next few years, however, frustration over inadequate infrastructure and schools encouraged many residents in the "belt" to support annexation. When the issue came to a vote again in March 1888, the Baltimore County Union newspaper recorded the testimony of one prominent resident in support of annexation:

I have, in half a lifetime, seen the cornfields of this neighborhood give way to rows of house, but for twenty years our government has been the same. The population has steadily increased, but there has been no corresponding progress in methods of government regarding sanitation, schools and other departments. No matter how willing the county commissioners may be to do what you want, they have neither the money nor the authority to comply.

Baltimore City and the Maryland State Legislature had crafted this latest annexation proposal to include generous incentives for property owners within the annex, including a twelve-year period where residents in the annex paid only half the city tax rate. In addition, as historian Joseph L. Arnold noted, "undeveloped block tracts with less than six houses on paved streets would remain taxed at the 1888 county rate regardless of how long they remained undeveloped and regardless of how much the county rate increased."<sup>7</sup> Ultimately, the residents in the western district of the "belt" voted 613 in support of annexation to 423 opposed, joining Baltimore City and extending the city line west from the Baltimore & Potomac railway line at Pulaski Street to North Augusta Avenue by New Cathedral Cemetery.

Edmondson Avenue, Catonsville and Ellicott City Electric Railway chartered – 1892

The first electric-powered streetcar system in the United States was introduced in Richmond, Virginia, in 1887 by Frank J. Sprague. The electric streetcar, or trolley, enabled people to ride in ten minutes as far they could typically walk in thirty minutes revolutionizing the patterns of suburban growth. From 1890 to 1907, the miles of streetcar tracks serving American cities grew from 5,783 to 34,404 miles. Hayward described streetcar service as a "prerequisite for rowhouse builders."<sup>8</sup>

Electric streetcars first arrived in Baltimore around 1890. The Edmondson Avenue, Catonsville and Ellicott City Electric Railway was chartered in October 1892, began laying track in 1895 and started service between Catonsville and downtown Baltimore in 1899. The Catonsville Argus reported:

The electric railway is the outcome of the project of Messrs. George Yakel, Carl Schon, Victor G. Bloede and other gentlemen who owned property in the vicinity of Catonsville and rely on rapid transit as a means for developing it.<sup>9</sup>

New opportunities for development in the area brought out the first wave of development companies purchasing property, including the Lyndhurst Improvement Company, the Washington and Baltimore Land Company (1894), and the Vigilant Realty Company. Other late 19th and early 20th century property owners in the area included J.H. & G.C. Knoop (Knoop Brothers), Henry Bogue (owner of the former Geltson estate), Louis Zaiser, and John Marr.

Lyndhurst Improvement Company invests in land along Edmondson Avenue – 1895

In April 1895, a group of Baltimore and Buffalo-based investors led by Joseph A. Oaks and Edward Burkhart purchased 286 acres in the area of Edmondson Village with plans to "subdivide and improve."<sup>10</sup> The Baltimore Sun reported on the plans to integrate the project with the development of a new streetcar line between Baltimore and Washington, DC, writing:

The proposed Baltimore, Catonsville and Ellicott City Railway, which is the Baltimore link of the projected Washington and Baltimore Boulevard Company, will run along Edmondson avenue and afford rapid transit facilities to aid in the development of the purchase.<sup>11</sup>

The Lyndhurst Improvement Company had incorporated a year before on April 5, 1894 with over $200,000 in capital stock.<sup>12</sup> Within a few years, however, the business ran into trouble and was forced to sell the estate. Multiple lots were listed for auction in late 1900 and, in 1901, court-appointed trustees sold two of the lots of ground (measuring 38.37 and 126.88 acres) to Frederick C.M. Lautz from Buffalo, New York on the south side of Edmondson Avenue between 18th and 19th Streets for $87,500.<sup>13</sup> The historic Lyndhurst mansion and 50 acres of land was advertised for sale in 1909 by P.C. Dugan & Nephew, as listed in the Baltimore Sun in early 1909:

Lyndhurst. Edmondson Avenue and Nineteenth Street. Magnificent Dwelling and Ground (50 acres) Completely Furnished. Every Convenience; Elevator, etc.: 5c. Fare; Beautiful View of Bay.<sup>14</sup>

By the early 1910s, the older detached houses on three corners at the intersection of Edmondson Avenue and Collins Avenue (19th Street) were joined by fifty new duplex rowhouses running east on both sides of Edmondson Avenue. Advertisements in spring 1912, the Aejis Company advertised the suburban rowhouses writing:

For Sale or Rent (With Privilege of Buying), Those New Modern Dwellings, Three Styles, at Lyndhurst Heights. Six are now occupied. Take Ellicott City car to Eighteenth street. Fare 5 cents.

In 1919, W.T. Zink advertised houses at 3938 Edmondson Avenue and 606 N. 18th Street, noting:

if you want a well-built modern up-to-date 2-story 8-room porch-front Dwelling that is like a new house and right up to the minute. I have them in these properties; they are ready for immediate possession. I will make satisfactory terms to the proper parties. This is worth looking into.<sup>15</sup>

Seven blocks east at Edmondson Avenue and Denison Street, other new houses were going up at the same time. Emmet White later recalled the early construction in the neighborhood, writing for the Baltimore Sun in 1949:

[Shepard G. Miller] built a row of brick houses in the 3400 block [of Edmondson], beginning at Denison street, running west... A little later Mr. Gerkin built twin brick houses with ornamental iron trim on the southwest corner of Edmondson Avenue and Eleventh Street, now Hilton.<sup>16</sup>

Shepard Gabriel Miller (1847-1932) was a Virginia native who moved to Baltimore in the 1870s and spent 30 years as a real estate dealer and developer before retiring to Matthews County, Virginia in 1909.<sup>17</sup> In June 1909, Baltimore City formally opened Hilton Street (formerly 11th Street). By the early 1910s, these brick duplex-style rowhouses had been joined by early daylight rowhouses north of Edmondson Avenue on Denison Street and Hilton Street.

The early development of rowhouses in both areas is notable considering that other suburbs in west and northwest Baltimore discouraged rowhouse development in favor of detached dwellings. When Rognel Heights began development around 1909 just east of Lyndhurst along Walnut Avenue investors solely built detached houses.<sup>18</sup> James Keelty continued the near exclusive development of rowhouses within the district from the 1910s through the 1940s.

James Keelty and the development of Edmondson Village – 1910s to 1950s

James Keelty built nearly every house in Edmondson Village constructed between the late 1910s and the early 1950s and helped to shape the “daylight rowhouse” as a model for developers working across the city. Born in Ireland in 1869, Keelty and his parents immigrated to Baltimore when he was around 10 years old. James Keelty’s son Joseph later described his father’s early career:

He was a stonemason by trade. Being an entrepreneurial type, I guess he decided to build a few houses down on Calvert Street, in the area where Mercy Hospital is.

James Keelty continued building in the area of Greenmount Avenue, working at times with his brother Patrick (or later his brother Michael), building a few houses before selling the remainder of his land for the construction of Oriole Park.

Keelty soon followed other builders out to the city’s western edge. In 1908, he started building two-story, swell front rowhouses along the 2300 blocks of West Fayette and West Baltimore Streets. During the 1910s, he continues building rowhouses on Mosher Street, Dukeland Street, and Riggs Avenue in the area of Poplar Grove (now the Mosher neighborhood). In 1911, Keelty built forty two-story houses on 11 acres located on the north side of Edmondson Avenue between Calverton Road and the Gwynns Falls. In 1912, he built 23 houses on south side of Harlem Avenue between Dukeland and Calverton.<sup>19</sup>

James Keelty buys property in Edmondson Village – 1917

James Keelty made some of his first purchases in the Edmondson Village area between 1916 and 1917. In October 1917, Keelty purchased 34 acres, as the Baltimore Sun noted:

James Keelty... took title to a tract of about 34 acres on Edmondson Avenue from A. deK. Sappington, trustee. It is believed that the purchase was made for development. The tract lies wholly within the city limits.<sup>20</sup>

Development on Keelty's 1917 purchase in Edmondson Village began gradually, perhaps, in part, because Keelty continued to sell rowhouses in the area of his Dukeland Park development along Poplar Grove. The distance from downtown and conditions along Edmondson Avenue west of the Baltimore City line also remained an issue. The Automobile Club of Maryland formally complained to the Board of County Commissioners requesting, "that Edmondson Avenue from the city limits to Catonsville be improved. The condition of the stretch of highway is deplorable."<sup>21</sup>

In January 1919, Keelty received a permit for 12 new dwellings for $19,000 on the west side of Denison Street, south of Harlem Avenue, designed by Frederick E. Beall. He also planned 19 new houses on the northwest side of Edmondson Avenue and Denison Street at a cost of $41,000.<sup>22</sup> At Edmondson Avenue and Loudon Avenue, Keelty built ten two-story brick dwellings and more houses at Edmondson Avenue and Norman Avenue.

Early in his career Keelty worked with a number of different architects, including Jacob Gerwig, but throughout the development of Edmondson Village, he worked exclusively with architect Frederick E. Beall. Beall was active through the early 1940s, appearing in city directories continuously from 1906 through 1942.

Born in Baltimore on October 2, 1885, Frederick Beall kept an office on St. Paul Street for more than forty years, designing churches, apartment buildings and ubiquitous rowhouses. Beall married Mary Elizabeth Linnbaum on November 29, 1905. In 1910, he lived on Wilkens Avenue with his wife and two daughters under the age of four. In 1920, he lived at 1335 North Gilmore Street.<sup>23</sup> At the time of his death in 1946 he lived at 2820 Santa Fe Avenue.

By 1921, development extended to the 3900 block of Edmondson Avenue and 600 block of Edgewood Street. Homes on the 600 block of Linnard Avenue were advertised for rent during the summer months of 1921, offering "3 daylight rooms, kitchen, bath, porch; all private; all conveniences." The roads also saw improvements as the city paved Loudon Avenue from Mulberry to Edmondson, Lyndhurst from Franklin to Edmondson, Mount Holly from Franklin to Edmondson, and Norman from Mulberry to Franklin.<sup>24</sup> In January 1922, Keelty filed plans for 94 new houses on the 400 and 500 blocks of Lyndhurst Avenue (numbers 400-422, 501-525, and 500-524), the 600 block of Grantley Street (numbers 601-627), and the 700 block of Linnard Street (numbers 701-735 and 700-746), each 20 by 33 feet and offering six rooms and a bath.<sup>25</sup> In July, he returned to Edmondson Avenue with plans to build 14 houses at 3701-3727 Edmondson Avenue.<sup>26</sup>

James Keelty acquires the Lyndhurst estate – 1922

In September 1922, the acquisition of nearby properties continued when the Baltimore Sun reported how Keelty had, "recently acquired of G. Howard White & Sons 25 acres of the Linhurst property... the purchase is the second Mr. Keelty has made from the original tract of several hundred acres."<sup>27</sup> The purchase gave Keelty control of most undeveloped land along Edmondson Avenue and the scale of the development quickly grew.

In January 1923, Keelty applied for permits for another 70 houses costing $126,000 at 709-757 Grantley Street (northwest side), and the northwest and southeast side of Linnard Street near Harlem Avenue.<sup>28</sup> Another report that same month described Keelty's plans for houses, "Containing 8 rooms and bath each... of the two-story brick porch front, daylight type, with average dimensions of 21 by 34 feet each." The location for the new construction was outlined in detail:

Twenty-five will be on each side of Grantley street, north of Harlem avenue; 10 on each side of the 700 block of Linnard street; 15 on each side of the 300 block of Lyndhurst street, and 10 in the 400 block of the same thoroughfare. Fifteen will be in the 2900 block of Mulberry street.<sup>29</sup>

In February 1923, Keelty submitted permit applications for 58 two-story brick dwellings costing $200,000 built at the southeast and southwest corners of Lyndhurst and Mulberry, at 401-23 Lyndhurst, and on the south side of Mulberry near Lyndhurst.<sup>30</sup> In August 1923, Keelty applied to build 11 two-story brick dwellings at 4001-21 West Franklin Street to cost $33,000.<sup>31</sup> That same month, he applied to build 39 houses, including 12 at 400-422 Mount Holly Street, 12 on opposite side (401-423), and 15 at 300-328 Mount Holly Street costing $75,000.<sup>32</sup>

Keelty's construction continued at this same rapid pace in October 1923, when filed a permit application for an additional 124 houses, as the Baltimore Sun described:

The houses will be erected by James Keelty in the vicinity of Franklin and Edgewood streets and will include several groups, aggregating 124 dwellings, of the two-story, brick, daylight, porch-front type. Containing seven rooms and bath, the houses will be built on each side of the 400 and 500 blocks of Edgewood street, the 3400 and the 3500 blocks of Franklin street, the 600 block of Allendale avenue and the 3600 block of Harlem avenue. Eighty houses of the same type now are under construction by the same builder.<sup>33</sup>

As new homes went up, new roads were laid down as in December 1923, when Keelty paved Linnard Street north of Harlem Avenue and Allendale Street from Edmondson to Harlem Avenues.<sup>34</sup> In January 1924, Keelty filed a permit application to build 40 dwellings on the 700 blocks of Edgewood and Gantley Streets (including 762-780 and 759-777 Grantley, and 717-735 and 724-742 Edgewood) at a cost of $125,000.<sup>35</sup>

In the mid and late 1920s, new construction seems to have slowed from the blistering pace of the early 1920s, likely following Keelty acquisition of new property along York Road and the beginning of that development in central Baltimore. Development just outside the Edmondson Village Historic District also continued in West Baltimore. In March 1925, Keelty purchased a three-acre tract from Robert S. Green on the south side of Mulberry Street west of Gwynn Avenue just south of the district.<sup>36</sup> In September 1925, Keelty filed a permit application to build 86 houses each 18' x 82' on Franklin, Mulberry, and Dennison Streets, and on Gwynn Avenue (at a cost close to $100,000).<sup>37</sup>

In October 1926, Keelty built eight rowhouses at the northeast corner of Harlem avenue and Allendale Street and eight of the same type at the northwest corner (for a total cost of $50,000).<sup>38</sup> In January 1927, Keelty filed plans for 24 rowhouses (for a cost of $72,000) on the east side of Hilton Street east of Allendale Road.<sup>39</sup>

James Keelty begins the development of Wildwood – 1927

In 1926, Keelty purchased the Gelston family estate (some portion of which had been acquired by the Baltimore City Parks Board in 1919) on the north side of Edmondson Avenue, west of Hilton Parkway and south of Gwynn's Falls Park. In June 1927, he purchased the Lyndhurst estate - comprising around 52 acres and the 3-story brick mansion house - from Annie M. and Mary Bogue at a cost of $160,000. The estate had originally included around 325 acres of land, an area gradually acquired by Keelty over the several years prior. The Baltimore Sun reported on Keelty's 1927 acquisition:

Plans for the property include the immediate development of the estate into a brick dwelling and cottage community. Grading operations now are under way and building operations soon will begin.<sup>40</sup>

Combining the property with his purchases from the Lyndhurst estate, in August 1927, Keelty laid out Wildwood Parkway, a wide, central, parked boulevard running from Edmondson Avenue to the Gwynn's Falls Park.<sup>41</sup> In his efforts to promote the neighbourhood, Keelty often highlighted the proximity to the scenic Gwynn's Falls Park in addition to the convenience of the streetcar ride connecting the neighbourhood to downtown.

The Wildwood development marked a new chapter in Keelty's development of Edmondson Village. One former resident, John Carpenter who moved in 1921 to a rowhouse on Normandy Avenue (then Norman), later recalled:

The houses in Wildwood, we heard at the time, were supposed to be Keelty's best. I guess he started and made money, and then when he got to Wildwood, he upgraded the houses. I had a couple of boy friends who were in the Scout troop [and lived] there, and I can remember going in their houses, and they had a third-story attic that was finished off, and I thought this would be great, to have a play room or study up there, which our houses didn't have.<sup>42</sup>

Wildwood was distinguished from the rest of the development by a 15-foot wide parked median and homes that were built wider and deeper at 22 ft. x 37 ft. than the rest of the area. An extra room in a half-attic and a detached garage offered further amenities and greater care with exterior details, including tile porches, distinguished the houses. Architectural historian Mary Ellen Hayward described the new effort:

Beginning in about 1927, James Keelty switched from building traditional Daylight houses and began to erect all brick English cottage rows modeled on Palmer's designs for York Court and Newland Street in Guilford or those houses built by Philip Mueller at Oakenshawe a few years later. The first rows faced the 4000 and 4100 blocks of Edmondson Avenue while other groups were built along the 600 blocks of Wildwood Parkway, Augusta and Woodington Avenues, just north of Edmondson.

In 1928 Keelty began advertising the "English Group Homes" available in Wildwood, at a cost of $7,000. These two-story group homes with tall, dormered attic stories were much larger than anything Keelty had previously built, measuring some 22'-wide by 37'-deep. They also boasted more quality features, including slate roofs, fireplaces, tiled front porches, and rear garages. Slightly projecting end units, with their tall gable ends facing the street, framed each row; inside houses had regular gable roofs with double, hipped-roof dormer windows. Each house had a deep front porch, with either a shed or hipped roof. Some decorative brickwork was used on the gable ends and the facades were enhanced by glazed brick patterns.

By January 1928, another account in the Baltimore Sun offered details on the planned development:

Construction of the group, which eventually will include about 1,000 dwellings, will begin at once, according to the announcement. The houses will be two and three story brick structures, containing eight and nine rooms and improving lots about 22 by 100 feet. Costs of construction will range from $8,000 to $14,000. The homes will be erected in groups of 100 units.<sup>43</sup>

Historian Mary Ellen Hayward observed that in this new development Keelty followed the example of Edward Gallagher's "Norman" style homes at Ednor Gardens, Keelty by offering more affordable English-style home in close proximity to the expensive new Wildwood houses. Keelty distinguished the development as "Lyndhurst," since the first of these rowhouses were built on the 700 block of Lyndhurst Avenue. Keelty sold homes on Lyndhurst between $4,500 and $5,450, in comparison to $7,000 for a home on Wildwood Parkway with a built-in garage. Ornamental cross gables were finished with either stucco or stucco and half-timbering broke up the typical rows to lend a more distinguished aspect. Each house featured a deep stone front porch, with either a triangular-shaped pediment (on the cross-gabled units) or a simple shed roof.

With the onset of the Great Depression in late 1929 the market for new housing slowed, but in Edmondson Village, houses built by the Keelty Company already occupied approximately 50 square blocks of the area by 1930. The economy encouraged Keelty to continue to build more affordable houses on cross-streets including Gelston Drive, Cranston Road, and Colborne Road. Other companies built small groups of houses with the area, such as the Columbia Construction Company advertising houses at Wildwood and Edmondson in April 1930. In March 1930, advertisements for homes on Gelston Drive described a typical property:

6 rooms, all daylight, hot-water heat, every convenience, brick porch with tiled floor. Gelston Drive and Edgewood st. No. 14 or 9 car to Edmondson ave. and Hilton st., walk north two blocks.<sup>44</sup>

In April 1930, Keelty applied for a permit to build 22 rowhouses on the 900 block of Woodington Avenue at a cost of $68,000.<sup>45</sup>

By April 1938, the Baltimore Sun saw a recovery in the local housing market, driven in part, by public investments in "slum clearance" projects. Keelty is included in the reported "$35,000,000

Building Boom” with the investment of $200,000 in homes at Rodger's Forge and "Homes in Wildwood, Edmondson avenue development.”<sup>46</sup>

In 1939, the Baltimore Sun reported that construction still continued in the area:

One of the largest home-building communities in the Edmondson district is Lyndhurst on the north side of the thoroughfare. Here construction has been going forward steadily for a number of years with a number of homes now going up. James Keelty is developing this area.<sup>47</sup>

By 1940, families could purchase a home in the Edmondson Village area for less than $3,390 (or just $8.62 per week with FHA financing). Keelty described these now somewhat-old-fashioned homes as “Unusual homes created for gracious living. All brick and stone, three large bedrooms, full tiled bath, ample closet space, beautiful stone porch, with terrazzo floor, lovely modern kitchen with many other features to make them desirable.” Keelty died in 1948 and the James Keelty Company built its last rowhouses in the area in 1954, selling off the remaining land and moving their operations to Catonsville and Rodgers’ Forge in Towson.

Development of schools, churches, and theaters on Edmondson Avenue – 1910s-1930s

The growth of the neighborhood between the 1910s and 1940s was not limited to rowhouses alone but included the organization of a community association, the growth of small neighborhood serving corner stores, and the establishment of new churches. One of the foremost residents of the Edmondson Village area during the 20th century was former Baltimore Mayor and Maryland Governor William Donald Schaefer who grew up in the community during the 1920s and 1930s.

With so few residents in the first decade of the 1900s (only 97 people lived in the Edmondson Village area in 1910) resident organizations were limited until the 1920s and 1930s.<sup>48</sup> In one early example from February 1909, the Lyndhurst Improvement Association joined the Bloomingdale Heights Improvement Association and the Dukeland Park Company in filing a lawsuit against the Edmondson Realty Company to try to stop the construction of a fire engine house, arguing that the "site selected is not a proper one."<sup>49</sup>

From the 1920s through the 1940s, the area of Edmondson Village acquired the nickname of "Mortgage Hill" for the many young families who settled in the community. Typical employers included McCormick's Spices, the B&O Railroad Company, the BG&E Company, C&P Telephone, Baltimore Transit, Hutzler's, Sun Life Insurance, and the U.S. Post Office. The population grew quickly to 8,991 residents by 1930.<sup>50</sup>

Most of the churches in the district were built in the period between the first and second World Wars. The earliest of these is the Rognel Heights Methodist Church (1918), followed by All Saints Lutheran Church (1922, architect Frederick K. Beall), Edmondson Avenue Methodist Church (1924, architect John Freund), St. Bernadine's Roman Catholic Church (1928-1929, architect Francis E. Tormey), and, lastly, Central Methodist Episcopal Church South (1930, architect Guy E. Gaston). Other improvements from the period include the Lyndhurst Elementary School (1926) and the Edgewood Theater (1930, John J. Zink). More detailed histories of the churches and schools can be found at the conclusion of the historic context.

Schaefer family moves to Edgewood Street – 1928

Notable residents in the 1920s included the family of Maryland politician William Donald Schaefer. Born on November 2, 1921, Schaefer and his family moved to a modest rowhouse at 620 Edgewood Street around 1928 when he was seven years old. The only child of William Henry and Tululu Irene Schaefer, William D. Schaefer attended Lyndhurst Elementary School, graduated from Baltimore City College in 1939 and from the University of Baltimore Law School in 1942. In William Donald Schaefer: A Political Biography, C. Fraser Smith described Schaefer's impressions of the neighborhood growing up:

If the neighborhood had published its collective goals, they would have been simple and straightforward: Keep your place nice; make money; send your kids to college. Directly across the street lived the Joynes family, who owned a little candy store... Individual shop owners thrived there in the days before supermarkets. Next to the Joyneses were the Bopps, a large family with three daughters. And next to them, the Weldons, who had a son and two daughters. Schaefer remembered Weldon as an expert in ceramics... A grocery store owned by Abraham Green stood at the south end of the street. Green put his kids through college too.

After a tour of duty in Europe during WWII, Schaefer returned to Baltimore and made unsuccessful runs for the Maryland House of Representatives in 1950 and 1954. In 1955, local political king-maker Irvin Kovens, nick-named the "The Furniture Man" thanks to his successful

West Baltimore furniture store, and Phillip H. Goodman, founder of the Dandy Fifth Democratic Club, State Senator and later Mayor, encouraged Schaefer to run for the Fifth District Baltimore City Council seat. Although Kovens later called Schaefer "Shaky" thanks to his uncertain confidence in victory, Schaefer went on to become first City Council President, then Mayor and eventually Governor of the State of Maryland. Schaefer continued to live on Edgewood Street for most of his life, sharing the house with his mother up until her death in the early 1980s, leaving the house only when he moved into the Governor's Mansion in Annapolis.

Lyndhurst Improvement Association and other community events – 1930

In 1930, the Lyndhurst Improvement Association hosted a lecture by Mrs. William Bauernschmidt, secretary of the Public School Association, at Keely Hall on Edmondson Avenue, debating the proposed changes to the structure of the Baltimore School Board.<sup>51</sup> In April 1932, the group elected James A. Wheatly as president of the association, with other officers including Harry West, George W. Beck, F. Millard Foard, and Ferd C. Volkman.<sup>52</sup> Another active group in the area was the Edmondson suburban group of the Women's Civic League, which played an important role in the organization of the Neighborhood Library Group (the predecessor to the local branch library) and organized social events such as a flower show planned for the home of Mrs. A.J. Harper at Edmondson Avenue and Harper Gate Lane in May 1933.<sup>53</sup>

New Baltimore Street Bridge built over the Gwynns Falls – 1931

The construction of a new bridge over the Gwynns Falls a generation earlier had opened Edmondson Village to new development but a new wave of investment in infrastructure came as the city adjusted to growing automobile ownership. In the early 1930s, a new concrete bridge carried West Baltimore Street over the Gwynns Falls. Mayor Howard W. Jackson observed the importance of the development, commenting:

The opening of this bridge marks an important step in the further development of this section of the city. The Gwynns Falls Valley for many years has been a natural barrier to quick communication between the older section of the city to the east and that evergrowing section to the west.

Hilton Parkway connecting the Gwynns Falls Parkway to Edmondson Avenue and Frederick Road was similarly significant. The route had been first identified by Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr. in his influential reports on the city's park system recommending the protection of the Gwynns Falls stream valley and the construction of scenic route through the park. Support from the New Deal-era Public Works Administration enabled the construction of the parkway in 1938 including two bridges, the largest of which spanned 390 feet with arches up to 90 feet.<sup>54</sup>

Long unpaved roads also saw improvements in this period. In September 1939, Baltimore appropriated $12,500 to pave a portion of Wildwood Parkway, enabling Keelty to begin construction on his planned 500 to 1,000 houses in the area. Keelty was responsible for paving all of the secondary streets but shared the cost with the city.<sup>55</sup>

Building Out Edmondson Village: 1940s – 1960s

In the years after WWII, the neighborhoods around the district saw major changes and new developments, among them the Edmondson Village Shopping Center and the Uplands Apartments (built by Ralph Chiaro in the 1950s). Developed by Jacob and Joseph Myerhoff, the Edmondson Village Shopping Center opened on May 7, 1947. The shopping center complex included a movie theater and a bowling alley (completed in 1949). The retail development expanded across Edmondson Avenue in 1956 with the addition of a branch location for the Hecht Company department store (now used as the Edmondson-Westside High School).

Multi-family housing and residential development in the late 1940s

The development of larger multi-family housing in Edmondson Village in the late 1940s and in many Baltimore neighborhoods followed a decade of growing interest in apartments as a way of addressing the housing issues of American cities. In 1934, the National Housing Act created the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) with the purpose (described by the National Register Bulletin on Historic Residential Suburbs) to “establish national standards for the home building industry and authorizes Federal insurance for privately-financed mortgages for homes, housing subdivisions, and rental housing.”<sup>56</sup> The act also enabled the FHA to create the Large-Scale

Rental Housing Division which reviewed designs and set standards for large-scale rental housing projects in the 1930s.

In Baltimore and around the country, multi-family housing initially responded to demand for affordable housing when the market for single-family homes still remained uncertain in the late-1930s. In the 1940s, new apartment projects served as defense housing during World War II and continued to grow to house returning veterans after the end of the war.

The designs of these projects were influenced by the review of FHA architect Eugene Henry Klaber and a series of "Architectural Bulletins" published by the FHA in 1940. These bulletins offered models for all aspects of apartment design from kitchen layout to the landscaping of common areas. These model designs were strongly influenced by the innovative garden apartment communities at Sunnyside, Radburn, and Chatham Village. Ames and McClelland describe the common design standards for projects in this period:

Such designs would provide attractive dwellings at a higher density and lower cost than neighborhoods of single family homes. To achieve the highest standards of safety and quiet, the standards for projects containing several hundred units called for the development of superblocks with garden courts, ample thoroughways with pedestrian underpasses and walkways, parking and garage compounds, centralized trash stations, and the elimination of service alleys. Clearance between buildings was carefully considered to provide adequate light, free circulation of air, and privacy. A maximum height of three stories was recommended unless elevators could be provided. Landscaping around foundations, common areas, and the circulation network, was recommended depending on rental costs and project's capitalization.

New apartment projects in Baltimore built or started by 1940 include Hilton Village, Dundalk Apartments, Northwood Apartments, Oaklee Village, and Samester-Parkway Apartments. In 1940, architect William N. Denton designed Westover Manor by the Ten Hills neighborhood at Edmondson Avenue and Cooks Lane for 108 families.<sup>57</sup>

The later developers working in the Edmondson Village area included D.J. Pistorio, the Kevin Company, and the Edmondale Building Company owned by Leonard Stulman. This period added a large number of new housing units, as Dr. Ed Orser has observed:

During the 1940s, the portion north of Edmondson Avenue (tract 1608) increased its housing units by 43 percent, and during the 1950s by another 19 percent. South of Edmondson Avenue (tract 2007) expansion was on a slightly smaller, but still impressive, scale: a growth rate of 25 percent during the 1940s and 16 percent during the 1950s.

Edmondale Building Company constructs group homes and apartments – 1948-49

Leonard Stulman organized the Edmondale Building Company around 1948 when the firm began building and advertising affordable rowhouses in the Edmondson Village area. A Baltimore-native, Stulman graduated from City College in 1922 and continued on to earn a bachelor's degree from Johns Hopkins University in 1926. Stulman started working for a title company and studying at the University of Maryland law school where he received a law degree in 1929. In 1935, he started doing modest rehabilitation projects and soon moved to building new homes in Forest Park, Highlandtown and Ashburton among other city neighborhoods. His larger multi-family apartment projects included the Kenilworth at Charles apartments, Kenilworth at Hazelwood, Kenilworth at Perring Park and Kenilworth at Alameda. He also developed North Plaza Mall in Carney and the Charles Towson office building.<sup>58</sup>

Stulman's work in Edmondson Village began with rowhouse construction, advertising a "6 Room Colonial Brick Group Homes" on Mt. Holly Street north of 3800 Edmondson Avenue priced at $8290 for the smaller model or $9240 for the larger model.<sup>59</sup> By 1949, Edmondale Apartments were advertised for rent as "New, Private Corner-of-Group One-Bedroom Apts" with a monthly cost ranging from $69.50 for first floor apartments to $67.50 for a two-bedroom. The advertisement offered tours of the model apartment located at 1102 Mt. Holly Street and highlighting the "preferred neighborhood" and privacy of the apartments writing:

These corner-house apartments are more like a home of your own. Extra windows, extra light, a larger lawn, real privacy! Planned for a couple's comfort... In a preferred neighborhood that is away from the roar of midcity... but only 20 minutes from downtown by streetcar.<sup>60</sup>

In November 1949, the company received building permits to substantially expand its investment in the area with the construction of "273 units in a garden-type apartment projects to comprise buildings two stories high to house 9 to 21 families each... erected in the 4100 block of Mountwood road, 1300 block Wildwood parkway, 4100 block Stokes drive, and 1100, 1200 and 1300 blocks of Woodington avenue."<sup>61</sup>

D.J. Pistorio builds houses in area – 1947-1949

D.J. Pistorio began work as a home-builder working alongside his father at Joseph Pistorio & Son with offices at 3201 Gwynn's Falls Parkway when they built homes in the Walbrook area during the 1920s. Pistorio began working on his own around 1937 when he started advertising new "brick cottages" for sale in Ashburton. In Edmondson Village, he built houses between 1947 and 1952, maintaining an office a couple blocks south of Edmondson Avenue at 150 Denison Street.

Keelty Construction Company and the Kevin Company develop Wildwood Section 10 – 1949-1956

In November 1949, the Keelty Construction Company received permits to build 6 one-family dwellings at 700-710 Kevin Avenue for $30,000. In January 1950, the Keelty Realty Company received permits for another 27 dwellings on Kevin Road. In June 1951, the Keelty Company announced their plans to build 30 dwellings on Kevin Road at a cost of $210,000.<sup>62</sup> The name Kevin was likely given to the street after James Keelty, Jr.'s son Kevin born in 1945. As the Keelty Company moved out of the area they evidently set up the Kevin Company to manage the remainder of the development in this area. Between 1954 and 1957, the Kevin Company built and sold homes in the "Edmondson Village Area," partially developed as Wildwood Section 10. One advertisement described a sample house at 1104 Kevin Road at Rokeby Road as a 3-bedroom brick group home for sale at $9950.

Community activism in the 1950s and 1960s

In the 1950s, new community organizations developed in the neighborhood to take on a leadership role for the issues affecting local residents, particularly around transportation and housing. In 1954, the Allendale-Lyndhurst improvement Association planned to "protest every feature" of a proposal by Baltimore City traffic director Henry A. Barnes to eliminate streetcars west of Poplar Grove Street on Edmondson Avenue in favor of busses. On August 13, 1954, the Baltimore Sun reported:

The Allendale Lyndhurst Improvement Association issued a statement saying it opposed the plan because there could be inadequate bus service, slower and less service, bus exhaust fumes which would create a health hazard, vibration caused by heavy truck traffic and a lessening of automobile parking spaces in the association's neighborhood area.<sup>63</sup>

Other groups took on zoning issues and other transportation issues. In 1960, the Wildwood Improvement Association requested that the city rezone property along Woodington Road, between Colborne Road and Cranston Avenue from first commercial to residential use.<sup>64</sup> In 1962, nine different West Baltimore community associations, including both the Wildwood Improvement Association and the Allendale-Lyndhurst Improvement Association, joined together as the West Baltimore Steering Committee to oppose the development of an East-West Expressway through Leakin Park.<sup>65</sup>

The transition from streetcars to automobiles also accelerated the movement of many white households out of the city helping to create new opportunities for black families to move west, out of the historically segregated neighborhoods east of Fulton Avenue. Dr. Ed Orser quotes one black resident of Greater Rosemont recalling the history of white flight in the late 1940s:

Black people started moving out of the confined areas somewhere around 1947 or 1948, but what would happen was that whites would evacuate a block or two blocks, and black people would move in. The evacuation would take place first. I remember streets like Fulton Avenue, Monroe Street—they were once totally white, and they went through the transition and changed somewhere between 1946 and 1949—that was the time I was in service. When I went in, there were no black people when I came out, there they were black streets... But it wasn't integration... it was an evacuation.

The issue reached Edmondson Village around 1955, when the first black residents moved west of the Gwynns Falls to live in the southeast corner of the region, around the western end of the Baltimore Street Bridge. One white resident remarked on the experience, commenting to Dr. Ed Orser:

When the [black] people started moving into the neighborhood, they did come in, literally block by block. I can recall when they came across the... bridge, everybody was very upset; they said, 'Oh my God, they're over the bridge now; our street will be next.'

In April 1958, the improvement group organized their annual meeting at School No. 88 located at Wildwood Parkway and Gelston Drive, hosting Chief Judge Delany Foster of the Orphans

Court of Baltimore as the guest speaker.<sup>66</sup> In July 1958, Association president L.E. Larsen gave the association's support to a plan sponsored by the Baltimore Urban League, the Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, and the Citizens Planning and Housing Association to "combat the conversion of Baltimore areas from all-white to all-Negro occupancy." Larsen observed that Edmondson Village:

already faced with pressure from block-busting realtor tactics and population shifts... the exodus from the city of the stable core of responsible citizens will likely be accelerated and the inevitable consequences will be a set-back to many of the long-range plans now being developed and implemented.<sup>67</sup>

By 1960, however, the area south of Edmondson Village had changed from more than 99% white in 1950 to 62% black in 1960 and, a decade later, 92% black in 1970. Edmondson Village itself remained 99% white in 1960 but had changed to 97% black by 1970.<sup>68</sup>

1968 Riots in Edmondson Village Area - 1968

Following the assassination of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., protests and violence erupted in many of the city's African American neighborhoods. People broke windows and looted several stores at the Edmondson Village Shopping Center. The Baltimore '68 project identified reports of violence including the looting of a black-owned sandwich shop in the 3500 block of Edmondson Avenue and unconfirmed reports of sniper fire in the 4000 block of Edmondson Avenue.

In a 2007 oral history, Barbara Gaines, a former resident of the area at 618 N. Denison Street, recalled how the response to the riots damaged many of the corner stores located within the neighborhood:

Really, there was nothing else left in the general community. Cause once that store was ripped apart...I mean, we didn't have that many stores. I mean, you would had have to gone up into Edmondson Village or have gone downtown. You know what I'm saying? But they had corner stores, but, it was free for all. The doors were open; it was nothing left in them. Nothing! So, the owners...what were they to lock? It was nothing in there.<sup>69</sup>

In 1969, a coalition of black and white civil rights advocates, including chairman Sampson Green, an African-American attorney, member of the Maryland Human Relations Commission, and housing committee chairman, and John J. Martinez, white Jesuit teacher at St. Bernadine's, organized The Activists—an interracial fair housing organization. The group targeted the Morris Goldseker Company with protests outside its downtown offices highlighting its role as “block-busters.” Operating under a variety of names, the Goldseker-related realty companies doubled the mark-up on house sales in Edmondson Village in comparison to other areas. The Activists described how companies purchased houses for an average of $7,320 and sold them for an average of $12,387, a markup of 69%, with the inescapable conclusion that, “The dollar in the hands of the white man buys more than the dollar in the hands of the black man.”<sup>70</sup>

Religious and School Buildings

All Saints Lutheran Church/Mount Olive Holy Evangelical Apostolic (1922) – 3816 Edmondson Avenue

All Saints Lutheran Church was built in 1922 in a Tudor Gothic style at a cost of $50,000. Architect Frederick K. Beall designed the building using Port Deposit granite and with an auditorium with enough room for 350 people. Beall had frequently worked for James Keelty in the residential development of the area. The church celebrated the 25th anniversary of its building's construction in 1947<sup>71</sup> and the church dedicated a new parish house in 1954.<sup>72</sup> During the 1970s, the church became an epicenter for fight over I-70 as the Interstate Division for Baltimore City regularly held public hearings there.

The present congregation of Mount Olive Holy Evangelical Church began in 1941 when Bishop Walter Madison Warner began holding services at the home of Ella Jackson at the 1300 block of Ward Street. Initially only four members, the church opened a mission at 600 Archer Street in South Baltimore later that year. The congregation relocated to West Baltimore in 1947 at 2226 Pennsylvania Avenue and then moved again to the 600 block of Calhoun Street. In 1960, the congregation moved to 1639 Moreland Avenue. Finally, in 1975, the congregation moved to the former All Saints Lutheran Church at 3816 Edmondson Avenue.<sup>73</sup>

Edmondson Avenue*

Edmondson Avenue Methodist Church was formed out of the merger of a Methodist Protestant congregation located at Edmondson and Grantley and the Christ Methodist Protestant Church previously located closer to downtown at Baker Street near Fulton Avenue.

The Edmondson Avenue Methodist Protestant Church began in the early 1920s, holding its first services in a frame building on the south side of Edmondson Avenue. When one of the church's 13 founding members, Mrs. Susan Mister Joynes, passed away in August 1971, the Baltimore Sun shared a description of the early history of the church:

Edmondson avenue was a two-lane road beside trolley tracks when she helped organize the church and its Sunday schools in 1921. She baked thousands of Parker House rolls to raise money for the building fund and visited hundreds of new families moving into the rapidly expanding area.<sup>74</sup>

In December 1924, the church announced plans for a new $50,000 building designed by architect John Freund. The building was designed in a Gothic style with a tower and capacity for 300 people.<sup>75</sup> In August 1928, the church began a substantial expansion, again with architect John Freund, adding a school and recreation hall before it reopened with a week of special services starting on February 17, 1929.<sup>76</sup>

In 1954, Rev. Dr. Leonard B. Smith (1883-1957) retired after 20 years as the pastor at Christ Edmondson Methodist Church after reaching the compulsory retirement age of 72 for Methodist ministers.<sup>77</sup> Smith served for five years as the president of the Maryland Protestant Conference and was a delegate to the 1939 conclave in Kansas City, Kansas that united the disparate branches of Methodism.<sup>78</sup> Around the late 1940s, the church became known as Christ Edmondson Methodist Church. The building is presently occupied as the Manifest Wonders Christian Church and Ministries.

St. Bernadine's Roman Catholic Church was built between 1928 and 1929 at Edmondson Avenue and Mt. Holly Street. The building served as a memorial to the Nora Bernardine Keelty, the daughter of builder James Keelty who died at age six in 1922. Prior to the construction of the new church, the area's many Catholic residents attended church at St. Edward's on Poplar Grove or St. William's on Cooks Lane.

Completed in 1929, the church was designed by architect Francis E. Tormey, Jr. along with a school, a convent and a rectory. The church had a frontage of 70 feet on Edmondson Avenue, 142 feet on Mount Holly, and a tower measuring 85 feet high.

Francis E. Tormey, Jr. (December 17, 1894 – May 18, 1971) also designed the Furst Memorial Chapel at Most Holy Redeemer Cemetery (dedicated May 30, 1917) and many Catholic churches and schools, including St. Piux V (1907) at Edmondson Avenue and Schroeder Street, St. Josephs's (1913), St. Bernard's (1926) at Independence Street and Gorusch Avenue, along with school buildings for St. James (1925) on Somerset Street and St. Elizabeth's (1926) on Lakewood Avenue. His secular architecture included several theaters, including the Aurora (1910), the Gertrude McCoy (1915), and the Horn Theater (1920). Tormey worked for his father, Francis E. Tormey, Sr. (c. 1865 - 1935) as a designer and draftsman for seven years, as an architect at the firm of Taylor & Fisher for six years, and for architect James R. Edmunds, Jr. for two years before starting his own independent practice in 1929.

Central Methodist Episcopal Church South/New Covenant United Methodist Church (1929-1930) – 700 Wildwood Parkway

New Covenant United Methodist Church was originally built for the congregation of the Central Methodist Episcopal Church South. This prior congregation was organized around 1866 and moved to Edmondson Avenue by Harlem Park in 1876. In 1926, the church purchased a property on Wildwood Driveway and in November 1929 sold the old building and announced plans to start construction on a 3-story Sunday school building designed by architect Guy E. Gaston.<sup>79</sup>

Construction began on a new church building at a cornerstone laying ceremony attended by 300 people in May 1930. The building was estimated to cost $65,000.<sup>80</sup> The church merged with the Summerfield Methodist Church, previously located on Poplar Grove, around 1954 when the Rehoboth Church of God in Christ Jesus Apostolic purchased Summerfield's building. Through the years, the church offered a variety of programs and religious services. In February 1965, the church (then known as the Central-Summerfield Methodist Church) offered an “old-fashioned minstrel show” in its fellowship hall.<sup>81</sup>

Edgewood Theatre/Mount Olivet Baptist Church (1930) - 3500 Edmondson Avenue

Established in 1922, Mount Olivet Baptist Church has occupied the historic Edgewood Theater since the late 1960s. The Edgewood Theater was built in 1930 and designed by one of the city’s most prominent theater architects – John J. Zink. Before the theater was built, in 1927, James Keelty offered Baltimore City the lot at the northwest corner of Edmondson Avenue and Edgewood Street to build a branch library, even suggesting he could, “erect a library building on the lot and give the city its own time in which to pay for the structure.” According to the Baltimore Sun:

[Keelty] further offered to allow the city the use of one of his houses in the neighborhood for a temporary library, pending the erection of a permanent library building, if the city would furnish the coal for heating purposes, and also the lighting, and if the library trustees would provide the books.

Thomas M.L. Musgrave, member of the City Council for the Fifth District that included this area in West Baltimore, commented:

People living in the Ten Hills, Rognel Heights and Hunting Ridge sections have been trying to get a branch of the Pratt Library for some time, and it now looks like all they need is the cooperation of the city and the library trustees to supply it immediately, even though it would be housed in a temporary building for the present. I am in hopes that Mr. Keelty's offer will be accepted and I express also the hopes and wishes of the people of the entire section.<sup>82</sup>

Keelty and the associated Lyndhurst Corporation tied the donation of a library to a proposal to erect a building at the southwest corner for “moving pictures, stores and bowling alleys.” The proposal authorized but did not require the construction of a library and the builder had not yet established any agreement with officials from the Enoch Pratt Free Library. Jackson had vetoed a similar ordinance in 1927 and Mayor Broening did the same with this one in July 1928, writing:

I think it unwise, in the absence of any definite agreement or understanding between the proper authorities charged with the administration of the library system of Baltimore to link the authorization for the granting of a privilege to erect a moving-picture parlor and bowling alleys to such a proposition.<sup>83</sup>

Despite this initial denial, Keely won the privilege not long after and the theatre opened in 1930. The large Neo-Classical style theater featured a tall electric sign (a near twin of the Patterson on Eastern Avenue). The theater closed in 1961 and had a brief second life as an art house theater in 1962 before closing permanently.<sup>84</sup> Bishop Wilburn S. Watson led the congregation from their building on Riggs Avenue to Edmondson Avenue in the late 1960s and the church has remained ever since.

The Mount Olivet Baptist Church was established in 1922. Rev. Wilbur S. Watson became the pastor in 1962 when the church was located at 1308 Riggs Avenue. Rev. Watson led the church's efforts to move to Edmondson Avenue and continued to serve the congregation up until his death in February 2009.<sup>85</sup>

Lyndhurst Elementary School (1926) – 621 Wildwood Parkway

Planning for the Lyndhurst Elementary School began when residents organized the School Association of Ten Hills, Rognel Heights and Lyndhurst and met to discuss the "School Loan" with J. Barry Mahool, then a member of the Public Improvement Commission, in October 1922 at Rognel Heights Methodist Episcopal Church.<sup>86</sup> By December 1924, the Public Improvement Commission had allocated $210,000 for the building, architect fees and landscaping, and selected William F. Stone as the architect.<sup>87</sup> Stone grew up in Baltimore and attended St. John's College at Annapolis, Maryland. As a young man, age 18, he started work at the office of Otto G. Simonson.

The cornerstone for Lyndhurst Elementary School was laid on Collins Street in March 1926 in a ceremony that included hundreds of neighborhood residents, pastors from local churches, former

Verbal Boundary Description:

Beginning from the northwestern corner of Hilton Street and Edmondson Avenue, the district boundary continues west along Edmondson Avenue for approximately  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a mile to the intersection of Edmondson Avenue and N. Woodington Road. The boundary includes both the east and west side of N. Woodington Road following the rear property lines to Wicklow Road and Wicklow Road until it meets the property of the Rognel Heights Elementary School. The boundary continues down the center of Wicklow Road to Seminole Avenue, continues east on Seminole Avenue to Rokeby Road and Rokeby Road to N. Woodington Road. The boundary continues north on N. Woodington Road to Stokes Drive, southeast on Stokes Drive, past Mt. Holly Street, to Colborne Road. The boundary continues west on Colborne Road to Allendale Street, south on Allendale Street to Gelston Drive and then follows Gelston Drive to N. Hilton Street. The boundary continues south on N. Hilton Street to Edmondson Avenue to end at the northwestern corner.

Boundary Justification:

The proposed district boundaries include all of the property historically associated with the Gelston Heights and Lyndhurst estates that was developed by James Keelty north of Edmondson Avenue. The boundaries exclude the distinct development Rognel Heights on the east.
